The enigmatic Deepak Chopra once asked, "Where would you begin to solve a mystery that is everywhere, yet somehow never forms a whole message?"

The heavyweight champ of metaphysical movie documentaries, The Secret, has been almost single-handedly responsible for causing a mass-movement in what we like to call "inner world sleuthing." It, for better or worse, has started to bring out the Sherlock Holmes of Spirituality from once uninterested individuals.

People, everywhere, more than ever, are now openly fascinated with life's hidden dimensions. What once was thought of as a closed door, off-color form of self growth is now the cat's meow.

Where two forms of research once battled each other for supremacy, polls now show that over seventy-five percent agree that science and spirituality are two sides of the same coin.

The mindset is now: "How could we label something as true or valid without looking at or questioning what quantum-psychology and quantum physics is saying too?"

It's common knowledge that our world has come to be understood through our physical senses. We've come to expect that the world-renowned scientists and doctors who find "proof" for theories and cures for diseases do so in a left-brain dominant way. The left brain is linear, rational, analytical, and linguistic. And, by golly, it won't rest until it has figured out a way to make everything in life fit within the realm of the "completely knowable."

But, who does the world-at-large lean on when something "semi-unexplainable" comes into existence in a big way?

When big-name talk show hosts are inviting guests to explain the Law of Attraction to the mainstream, mistakenly labeling it an update to the Power of Positive Thinking and causing millions of people to walk around with the mistaken belief that belief is all it takes, that's when someone has to step in, take control, and cut through the crap. For the last few years, collectively and individually, we (as in “us”) have been living our purpose and passion in the pursuit of deep insight about the mind, real-world success principles, and the mysteries of manifestation.

We’ve tracked down, researched, sorted, and selected (for the most part) the right-brain dominant metaphysical mentors and spiritual gurus who can help us make sense out of all the “fuss” behind The Secret and other popular movies and current-day mindsets that teach “core level growth.”

The right brain shrouds itself in intuition, artistic and holistic thought and communication. Somebody dominant here will usually express the inexpressible and describe the indescribable in ways that allows the rest of us to have that “A-ha moment” of understanding.

And yet... they understand that the mind works in harmony with the body, the spirit works in harmony with the Universe, and that the core truth to what creates the realities we all live in (for none of us are ever experiencing the same reality) can’t be fully explained in a 30-second sound bite.

What is the Secret to Learning The Secret?

(And, when we say “learning” we put emphasis on the process rather than the end result. After all, results only come AFTER you’ve spent time immersing yourself in THAT process. And... it’s just further proof that success is in fact a journey, not a destination.)

It’s simply this: Start putting whole-brain thinking into ALL that you see and hear. Yup, that’s right, strive for the “wholistic” rather than just the “holistic”.

When you lead with your inquisitive, analytical, rational left brain and follow-up your exploration with a mix of emotion, gut-level intuition and sensory-deduction, you LEARN to:

A) See, feel, and experience the gray areas of life – that part of life that keeps you from getting tied down to any one system, ideology, method or mentor without some honest-to-goodness evaluation on how it can or will enhance your lifestyle.

B) Consistently keep an “adaptable awareness” about you. You become welcoming, not fearful, towards change. After all, growing by definition requires change, and change means leaving your comfort zone, and you can never follow your success journey while locked in that static illusion of safety.

C) Gently question, with an open mind, the information coming at you. After interviewing many mentors, it’s our experience that you really can’t find your own base knowingness about something completely intangible as the Law of Attraction, or any other metaphysical law, until you first question all aspects of its application in your life.

That’s why we created our highly-respected knock-your-socks off audio and transcript package at MastersOfTheSecret.com... to help you grow, expand, and create from a place of self-evident understanding.

It is our mission to give you access to multiple viewpoints, different angles, and even opposing commentary on the art and science of manifesting!

Why would we set up that apparent disagreement?
Present you with answers that are not cut and dry?

The more you force yourself to assess what you see and hear through scrutinizing eyes and ears, the more you're forced to search, sort, sift, and select the wisdom that synchronizes with your own soul.
Something will resonate with you.

Somebody will give you that a-ha moment. Some quote will change the way you look at the world... or the way you look at coffee (Secret Master #1 will explain this insight in much more detail).

And you'll emerge looking at the reflective hologram of a world we live in with your eyes wide open, and ready for the next signs.

AN L.O.A. MOMENT

In order to be happy you have to look inside of
you. Find what makes you happy. Each day
that you wake up think about what you have to be grateful for. By doing this, you are creating thoughts and feelings of happiness that will be attracted back to you
through the Universe.
